PINE CAMP PARTY

A Christmas Entertainment Will Be Enjoyed There This Morning.

Among the many parties and entertainments which will take place here this Christmas, none will perhaps give more genuine pleasure than one which takes place this morning at Pine Camp for the benefit of the inmates of that institution.

Manager Lyons, of the Colonial Theatre, has taken a deep interest in the matter, and through his efforts the entertainment has been arranged.

The first person to appear in the performance is "Baby Zella," six years old, said to be the youngest and cleverest child on the American stage.

As there are several children now at Pine Camp, it is needless to say they will take deep interest in all this little party given for their benefit.

Another act will introduce Morrissey and Rich, the clever comedy couple, now at the Colonial, who will give a song and dance such as they alone know how. They will be followed by Jack Roche, the star at the Empire Theatre, who will give some monologues.

Professor Len Garvey, of the Colonial, will preside at the piano and play with his usual skill.

The piano, by the way, has been loaned for the occasion by Mr. Corley, of the Corley Piano Co.

Pine Camp is full now, and the inmates have been looking forward with interest to this party.

In the presence of a few very intimate friends and members of the families of the bride and groom, a recent death in the family of the bride having resulted in the quietest possible ceremony.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John M. Wells, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, and the only attendants were Miss Ruth Stewart Smith, a sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and Alex. Sprunt, a cousin of the groom, as best man. The decorations were simple, but very attractive and effective. Engine, Hix Car Loaded with Dynamite.
(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Spencer, N. C., December 27.—A catastrophe was narrowly averted at Thomaston, Christmas 1912, when a locomotive on the Carolina and Tidewater River line, from Thomaston to Ingalls, dashed into a box car containing 2,000 pounds of dynamite. The front of the engine was torn off by the impact, and the box car was knocked a considerable distance, but, strange to say, the dynamite was not exploded. It is said the explosion, had it occurred, would have torn down almost every house in Thomaston, and men were on the locomotive when the accident occurred, though none was hurt.

FIGURES AS WITNESS IN LAWSUIT AT VIENNA

Count's Evidence May Bring Unhappiness to His American Wife.

BY LA MARQUE DE FONTENAY.

COUNT ALBERT Hohenau, who, with royal blood in his veins, was married last summer to Mile. Louka Boutourline, daughter of the Russian Count Alexander Boutourline and of his wife, who was Mile. Van Schalk, of the old Knickerbocker family of New York of that name, has just been figuring in a rather interesting fashion as a witness in a lawsuit at Vienna. If I call attention to it, it is because his evidence has been of a nature to shed what ill for the happiness of his half-American wife.

It seems that prior to his marriage he was with a Viennese dameuse of the name of Marie Eberstadt, who is known on the stage as Marie Peral. Since the marriage of Count Hohenau, she seems to have fallen into the hands of a man of the name of Koberer, and to have been, at the instance of his name, a subordinate of a Prussian Cuirassier Regiment at Breslau, was summoned as a witness.

During the course of his examination Count Albert Hohenau admitted that he had been compelled by his family to break off his relations with the dameuse, and that he was still extremely fond of her and that after his engagement and even since his marriage he had been in her company in Paris and in Italy. He regretted that it was untrue that he had married a Russian heiress possessed of thirty or forty millions, as he had had a very small amount at his disposal he would have hesitated to give at least several millions to his former innamorata.

Count Albert Hohenau is a grandnephew of old Emperor William and a grandson of the latter's daughter, Princess Albertine, the first wife of Prince Albert of the Netherlands, by whom he had a son and namesake who died as a Prussian field marshal and as regent of the Duchy of Brunswick. After divorcing Princess Albertine, the Count married Prince Albert's daughter, Rosalie von Raub, and she created Countess von Hohenau. By this marriage he had two sons, William and Frederick.

Count William Hohenau until 1912 held the rank of lieutenant-general in the Prussian army and that of aide-de-camp to the Kaiser. As a member of the latter's military household he was in constant attendance upon him. He was implicated, however, in those unsavory scandals which brought about the downfall of Prince Philip of Eulenburg, and several other officers of high rank, and as a result of this he was deprived of the Emperor of all his honors and dignities.

Count William Hohenau is a man of exceptional favor and graciousness on his part, and is, indeed, in all his long career as one of her ministers and as one of the foremost statesmen of her reign to receive such a compliment and unusual token of consideration. In this connection, Mrs. A. M. W. Stirling, in the "Correspondence" of Lady Elizabeth Spencer Stanhope of Channon Hall, which she has just published in London, prints a curious letter about the audience accorded by Queen Victoria to Charles Dickens and to Thomas Carlyle. It seems that when Dickens was presented to the Queen, not very long before his death, she kept him standing all the time and although kind in her manner, treated him "de haute en bas," not even offering to shake hands with him when he took his departure.

With Carlyle the case was somewhat different. The old Scotchman calmly took the initiative. Having greeted the Queen with due respect, he observed confidentially: "And now, your Majesty, I would remind you that I am a veritable old man, and so I will take a chair." And down he sat, without any permission on her part. He then with equal freedom proceeded to criticize her ministry, and give her much useful advice, which she nevertheless showed a foresight that she might have made use of with advantage. The Queen, however, was much affronted by his freedom of speech and after the interview declared that she would see no more literary men.

TO MAKE TOUR OF SCHOOLS.

Farm Demonstrator Wannier Has Headquarters at Heathsville.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Heathsville, Va., December 27.—R. A. Wannier, farm demonstrator for Northumberland and Lancaster Counties, and wife will make their headquarters in Heathsville. Mr. Wannier and Dr. Lewis will commence a tour of the schools in Lettsburg District the first week in January.

The season for partridge shooting is rapidly drawing to a close, as at a recent meeting of the Board of Supervisors it was decided it would be unlawful to hunt them after January 1. This action was taken because the birds seem to be getting very scarce. Larger quantities of holly have been shipped this season from this section to the nearby cities than for many years. Although the price is low, yet, each year a greater number engage in the business.
